CMW Seminar and Asian Buffet

Seminar: "New diagnostic and treatment options for Syringomyelia in CKCS"

Syringomyelia (SM) is a painful neurological problem that causes neuropathic pain (NP) behaviors such as scratching, face rubbing, and intermittent vocalizations in affected dogs. Development of an evidence-based approach to the management of SM-NP is currently limited by the lack of objective ways to assess severity of pain in dogs with the condition. The long-term goal of our group is to improve the diagnosis and management of neuropathic pain in dogs. This presentation will discuss a new tool developed by our laboratory to measure neuropathic pain in dogs with SM and to monitor response to therapy. It will also discuss on-going projects at OSU that focus on new ways to treat the signs of SM in affected dogs.
